ABSTRACT

This directory provides brief descriptions and contact information for indigenous education resources in four Western states: Arizona, California, Nevada, and Utah. The first section lists national associations, organizations, clearinghouses, and centers concerned with American Indian education and based in one of the four states. Sections on each of the four states list federally recognized tribes, American Indian centers, state government agencies and organizations, postsecondary institutions and related organizations, elementary and secondary schools and related organizations, American Indian media, museums and parks, Head Start programs, child care programs, Title IX Indian education programs, and Johnson O'Malley contractors. The California section also lists non-federally recognized tribes, California Department of Education Indian education centers by county, and early childhood education programs. (SV)

THE DIRECTORY OF INDIGENOUS EDUCATION RESOURCES in the WestEd Region is an updated version of the 1993 publication, the Directory of Native Education Resources in the Far West Region. The original document was a companion piece to the 1993 Native Education Directory: Organizations and Resources for Educators of Native Peoples of the United States and Territories. The revised version coincides with the recent release of a new national directory, 1998 Native Education Directory: Organizations and Resources for Native Americans. It has also been expanded to include listings of Head Start, Child Care, Title IX programs and Johnson O'Malley contractors in Arizona, California, Utah, and Nevada. This Directory is intended to be a catalyst for the exchange of first-hand information among individual users and listed organizations. The brief descriptions are meant only to suggest the content and scope of each organization's objectives and services. Effort has been made to obtain information about each entry, although some have more documentation than others. The organizations listed in this directory reflect the four states in the WestEd region. Inclusion does not suggest endorsement of any organization by WestEd.

The Directory was initially the product of a national collaboration among eight of the regional educational laboratories, the Native Education Initiative. Each of the participating laboratories produced a directory for its region. The directory for the WestEd region was also supported by the Rural Schools Assistance Program. Currently WestEd has independently taken the initiative to update and expand this directory, as part of its Indigenous Education Collaborative (IEC). For further information about the Collaborative, call Sharon Nelson-Barber, Elise Trumbull, or Floyd Beller at 415-565-3000.

WestEd (formerly, Far West Laboratory for Educational Research and Development) is one of 10 Regional Education Laboratories established by Congress in 1966. Today, the laboratories' enduring mission is to improve the quality of education by helping policymakers and practitioners apply the best available knowledge from research, development, and practice. As noted above, WestEd serves the four Western Region states: Arizona, California, Nevada, and Utah. As a nonprofit agency, we are guided by a board of directors made up of leaders from public and private education, business, and communities throughout our region. Funded by the Department of Education's Office of Educational Research and Improvement (OERI), WestEd also receives support from other government and state contracts, private and federal grants.

e-mail: aica@artswire.org
web site: <http://www.artsonline.com/aica.htm>

AICA is a non-profit independent center offering numerous services for Indian artists trying to bridge the gap between the traditional and the contemporary, and between Native and non-Native peoples. The center is dedicated to presenting the finest art of contemporary Native Americans and to providing a number of avenues for Indian artists to share their creative visions with the world.

AICA has been instrumental in helping shape the dominant culture's understanding of contemporary Native American art through a comprehensive program of exhibition, edu-tional outreach, promotion and sales, lectures, and workshops.

American Indian Lawyer Training Program, Inc.

319 MacArthur Boulevard
Oakland, CA 94610
Richard Trudell, Director
phone: 510/834-9333; fax: 510/834-3836
Founded in 1973, this organization has as its purpose the design and implementation of programs to promote tribal sovereignty and self-determination through provision of training resources to Indian attorneys, law students and advocates committed to serving the legal needs of Indian people.

American Indian Movement

54 Mint Street, Suite 400
San Francisco, CA 94103
Andrea Carmen, Executive Director
phone: 415/512-1501; fax: 415/512-1507
e-mail: iitc@igc.apc.org
Founded in 1968 and comprised of 5,000 members, this movement has as its primary objective encouraging self-determination among Native Americans and establishing international recognition of Native American treaty rights. The Movement also founded Heart of the Earth Survival School, which enrolls 600 preschool-to-adult students; publishes a quarterly newsletter, "Survival News;" hosts an annual meeting; conducts research; and maintains historical archives and a speakers' bureau.

International Indian Treaty Council

54 Mint Street, Suite 400
San Francisco, CA 94103
Andrea Carmen, Executive Director
phone: 415/512-1501; fax: 415/512-1507
e-mail: iitc@igc.apc.org

Ninety-eight traditional Indian governments came together in 1974 to form the International Indian Treaty Council. The Council's goal is to draw attention to Indian problems and rights, largely through the efforts of the American Indian Movement (see above). The Council prepares and gives regular presentations for the UN Commission on Human Rights; maintains a research and documentation center in South Dakota and an information center in New York City; publishes a quarterly newsletter, "Treaty Council News;" and hosts an annual conference.

National Center for American Indian Enterprise Development

953 East Juanita
Mesa, AZ 85204
Kenneth Robbins, Executive Director
phone: 602/545-1298; fax: 602/545-4208

The National Center, a non-profit organization funded by the Department of Commerce, helps Native American tribes and individuals establish and operate businesses in various fields, including manufacturing, service, construction, retailing, and wholesaling. The Center assists in developing management ability, preparing financial proposals, obtaining financing, bonding and insurance, and providing training in marketing and negotiations. In order to recover costs to maintain operations, the Center charges fees averaging $50/hour that can be billed to third parties such as the BIA or other public agencies.

The Center has a strong working relationship with banks, private industry, and government. An all-Indian board of Directors shapes the Center's policies of service to urban and reservation Indian communities.

National Indian Training and Research Center

2121 S. Mill Avenue, Suite 216
Tempe, AZ 85282
phone: 602/967-9484; fax: 602/921-1015

The purpose of this center is to involve Native Americans in leadership and professional roles in training and research projects for the social and economic betterment of Indian people, and to orient and train professionals working with Native Americans. Founded in 1969, the Center also conducts educational training programs, sponsors research and development to increase information and knowledge about Native Americans, publishes "Indian Education Update," a newsletter, and maintains a library collection.

National Native American AIDS Prevention Center

or 510/444-2051
fax: 510/444-1593
e-mail: nnaapc@aol.com

The AIDS Prevention Center is a national organization, funded by the Center for Disease Control, that provides technical assistance and information services to Native American, Alaska Native and Native Hawaiian communities nationwide.

The Center has two major functions. One is to assist communities in developing infrastructures for AIDS treatment programs by providing workshops on proposal writing, board training, program planning, and outreach program development. The second function is to operate case management pilot projects that demonstrate how Indian people on reservations and in urban areas infected with HIV can gain access to treatment and care.

National Native American Honor Society

Northern Arizona University, PO Box 5640
Flagstaff, AZ 86011-5640
Frank C. Dukepoo, Director
phone: 520/523-7227; fax: 520/523-7500
e-mail: frankdukepoo@nau.edu

Through membership in the Society, outstanding professional, intellectual, academic and personal standards are encouraged and rewarded. Any elementary, high school or college/university student who has earned a 4.0 semester anytime during his or her academic career is eligible for membership. In addition to the GPA, students are required to perform community or school service and write their success stories. Students are awarded publicly, and receive membership certificates and gold eagle pins. Special membership is also available to non-students, professionals, and non-Indians.

The Society also offers services in mentoring, support groups, communication skills, leadership training, goal setting, public speaking, self-esteem, how to improve grades, and overcoming procrastination.

Phoenix, AZ 85004

Joy Hanley, Executive Director

phone: 602/252-9040; fax: 602/252-9077

This organization provides direct service to Native American clients through its central office in Phoenix and field office in Winslow. It provides technical assistance to urban Indian centers, organizations and communities in the state of Arizona. Its main grant is through the Job Training and Partnership Act, which provides employment training for Indians living off-reservation in Arizona. The training is done in local sites such as community colleges and vocational technical schools. A pre-GED and Adult Basic Education program has been developed and is provided, at cost, to Indian organizations, community colleges and correctional institutions throughout the United States. Recent projects include the establishment of an arts and crafts cooperative in Winslow, which exhibits the works of Arizona Indian artists and craftspeople, and the development of an auto salvage yard in Winslow where Indian recovering alcoholics can gain automotive work experience.

The American Indian Studies Program (AISP) seeks to develop a wider scope of understanding of America's Indigenous peoples, their traditions, and their aspirations for self-determination. Indian Studies is an academic discipline open to both Native Americans and others. AISP is one of only two programs in the United States which offers a Masters of Arts degree in Indian Studies. Twenty graduate faculty (14 are Native American) serve a current student body of 60 (45 percent are Native American).

AISP is an interdisciplinary degree program with three graduate concentrations: Law & Policy; Societies & Cultures; and Languages & Literatures. The program is over two decades old and has graduated 70 students who have assumed positions of leadership within tribal governments, as well as state and federal agencies. Others have pursued J.D. or Ph.D. programs. The American Indian Studies Program also produces a journal, Red Ink: A Native Student Publication, which is designed to promote both scholarly and grassroots publishing by and for Native Americans and other interested members of the Indian community.

Johnson O'Malley Contractors

The Bureau of Indian Affairs provides funds to public school districts under the Johnson O' Malley Act of 1934 to meet the special educational needs of about 226,000 eligible Native American students in public schools. The JOM Act authorizes contracts for welfare and educational services, which is used to entice public school districts to assume more responsibility for providing an elementary and secondary education to Native American children who reside on Indian reservation land. The listings below include repeated contact information.

PO Box 6459

Ventura, CA 93006-6459

Paul Merryman, Director

phone: 805/643-4950; fax: 805/643-8136

This center's Innovative Tobacco-Use Prevention and Intervention Program focuses on teaching Santa Barbara/Ventura County Indian students in grades 6-9 the harmful effects of tobacco use. Students learn how to recognize and lower the influences of the risk factors and strengthen the protective factors that will help them reject the use of tobacco. To achieve this goal, the program includes: intensive training for staff, peer leaders, and interested parents; the use of peer leaders, group drama, group counseling, poetry, music, Saturday and evening Tobacco Prevention seminars; and the mobile (RV) Indian Culture and Tobacco Prevention Classroom.

The project has also developed a video to teach the harmful effects of tobacco use and how to remain positive and resist peer pressure.

Collaboration with community agencies such as the Heart and Lung associations, county health services, county school superintendents, and Healthy Kids Regional Centers strengthen the services being provided to the Indian youth.

gram. This program is part of a local high school student recognition program and allows Native American students to receive recognition from their peers when they choose a tobacco-free lifestyle. Peer educators will participate in an anti-tobacco, procultural health survival camp, and an Native American cultural conference. The Native American peer educators who complete the program will be recognized in a cultural awards ceremony. Each peer educator will receive a beaded eagle feather presented to them by the local Native American community.

The Center serves the educational and cultural needs of the University's Indian community. It coordinates educational research, develops new courses related to Native American cultures, promotes the hiring of Indian faculty, and strengthens efforts toward the recruitment and retention of Indian students. It sponsors lectures, symposia, national conferences, and workshops.

Additionally, the Center's library contains 6,000 volumes in areas related to Native American cultures and histories. The Center is a recognized Organized Research Unit and thus can sponsor research and administer competitive grants. Several Indian student organizations are based at the Center including American Indian Science and Engineering Society (AISES), American Indian Student Association (AISA), and the American Indian Law Student Association (AILSA).

The American Indian Studies Center's Library contains over 6,000 volumes on North American Indians (especially California and Southwest Indians). The primary focus of most of the literature is on Native American life, culture, and state-of-affairs in historical and contemporary perspectives.

Johnson O'Malley Contractors

The Bureau of Indian Affairs provides funds to public school districts under the Johnson O' Malley Act of 1934 to meet the special educational needs of about 226,000 eligible Native American students in public schools. The JOM Act authorizes contracts for welfare and educational services, which is used to entice public school districts to assume more responsibility for providing an elementary and secondary education to Native American children who reside on Indian reservation land. 4600 Kietzke Lane, Bldg B, Suite 116
Reno, NV 89502

Gerald Allen, Executive Director
phone: 702/688-1347; fax: 702/688-1803

The Indian Commission is a state agency which serves as the Governor's liaison to Nevada Indian tribes and colonies. It informs the Governor of problems, concerns and needs of Indian tribes, and makes policy recommendations to the Governor. The areas of attention cover a broad spectrum and include such issues as housing, education, health care, and social welfare, among others.

The Commission is also a liaison between businesses interested in exploring possible projects, and Indian tribes and organizations. A major activity is referring tribal groups and individuals to appropriate state or federal agencies or other tribal groups. The Commission also conducts research on legal issues unique to Indian tribes, such as jurisdiction parameters, tribal court law, sovereign immunity, and how state laws apply to Indian tribes.

Post-Secondary Institutions and Related Organizations

University of Nevada, Las Vegas

Affirmative Action Office

4505 South Maryland Parkway, Box 451009,
University of Nevada
Las Vegas, NV 89154-1009
702/895-3773

University of Nevada
Las Vegas, NV 89154-2023
Velicia Mcmillan, Director
phone: 702/895-4165; fax: 702/895-0100

The Multicultural Office supports cultural programs such as lecture series, cultural celebrations and events, and the publication of a newsletter. Recently, the Office helped sponsor a summer institute on campus diversity in which workshops on pluralistic leadership, multicultural education and diversity issues were offered.

The Office focuses on retention and outreach services, including academic advising, tutoring, study skills training, and proposal-writing workshops. An Upward Bound component hosts local high school student visits to campus and sponsors a summer orientation session for rural students.

Cross-cultural communication training is provided for residential and student support staff in order to improve their relationships with University minority students. Efforts to empower minority students are underway, including establishing an ethnic student council and providing support services for minority student organizations.
